CONSTRUCTION

This scene is a familiar sight to all who have had a glimpse of Sheridan High School this fall and winter. The new wing is badly needed and will certainly be an added attraction to the school when it is completed.

Upon its completion, not only will the wing have more classrooms, but it will also include a new music room, visual-education room, cafeteria, and showers.

It crawls on my pencil, tickles my nose;
Eats my lunch, and plays with my toes;
It tortures, it steals, it's a plague to me;
It's the nastiest thing I ever did see.
Gads! it's a fly, a monstrous thing
That hides in the dust, — Dust, oh, what a pain,
That chokes me and gags me.
It seeps in the windows and under the doors.
Through the walls, and up through the floors;
It settles everywhere, all over the place
Then comes the drill's steady pace,
What a nerve wracking sound!
The hammer's loud pound
Makes a crack in my brain,
And slowly drives me insane.
The workmen whistle and yell,
And it's —, but oh well,
We'll stand the fly, the noise, the dust,
For it's simply a must
To have our new wing,
Such a wonderful thing.

JANITORS

The smiling gents shown in this picture are the school custodians. Their duties include care of the gymnasium, halls, and classrooms, and the firing of the furnace.

Mr. Harbaugh and Mr. Land have been with the school for several years, but Mr. McKenzie joined the staff just this year. In case you cannot distinguish among them, they are:

BUS

All Aboard! Another day of school is over and it's time to shove off for home again. The first six grades are dismissed earlier than is the high school. They rush to the buses to get the choice seats much to the dismay of the high school students, who sometimes find that because of the large number of students living in the country, the buses are already packed full and seats are as scarce as hen's teeth.

BUS DRIVERS

In case you have not already recognized this group, its members are better known as the school bus drivers.

We wish to take our hats off to these individuals who certainly deserve credit for braving all kinds of weather and road conditions.

First Row: Gurnie Stowers, Russell Godby, Jr. Forebush, John Bowen, Harold Kercheval.
Second Row: Elisha Stowers, Mrs. Paul Armfield, Ray Noble, Everett Goff, Odie Cline, Lee Egler.

ART

A new department, of which everyone is very proud, was added this year. It is the Art Department, with Mrs. Doris Griffith as the art supervisor. Sheridan has never before had a trained art teacher.

Art is taught to the grade students and is offered as a course to the high school students. This is the high school class sketching out-of-doors.

MISS COLBY

One of the most indispensable persons in the school and to whom we owe a lot is the office secretary, Miss Colby. Besides her secretarial duties, she efficiently performs a variety of other tasks, such as applying first aid to ill or injured students. Around tourney time, she is exceptionally busy handling basketball tickets.

HOME EC

What's Cooking??

These industrious beavers of the kitchen represent the Home Economics department of Sheridan High School. Many delicious delicacies are prepared by the girls under the able supervision of Mrs. Esther Linn.

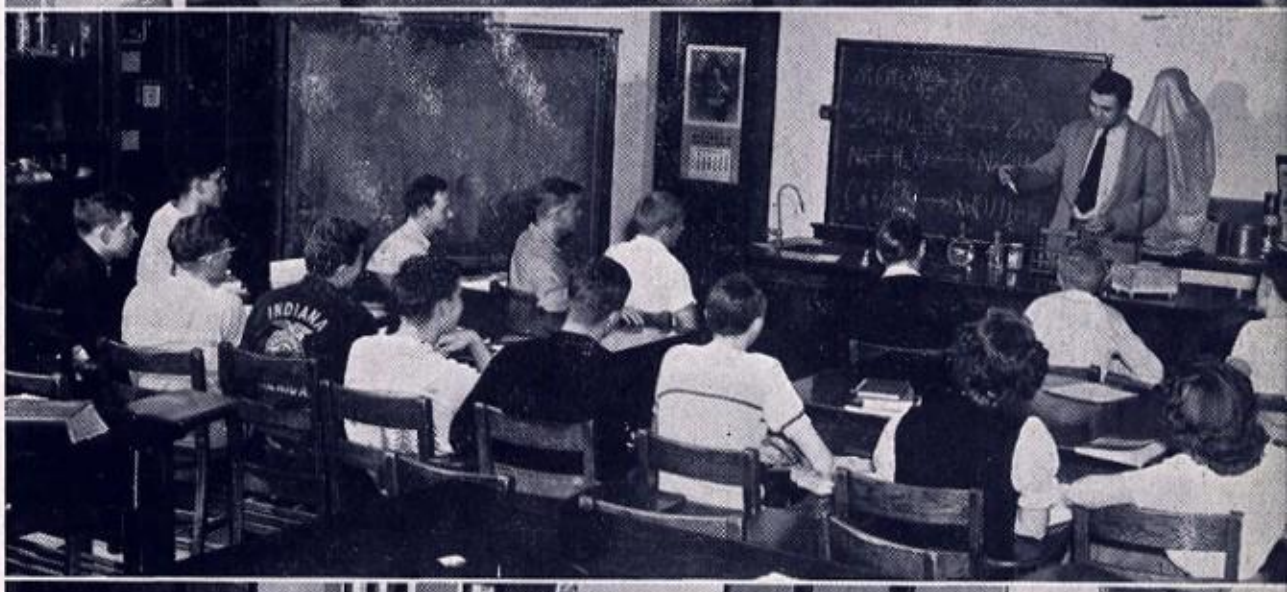
Not only do the girls learn the phases of the culinary arts, but they also learn about sewing, home decorating, buying thriftily and all the helpful hints that will enable the girls to later become competent homemakers.

CHEMISTRY LAB

My, what mysterious proceedings are going on here? This must be the chemistry lab. Could this be the discovery of a new chemical compound that will set the world ajar??

Those flasks and test-tubes make a fascinating array and the class certainly seems interested in the experiment Mr. Hobson is explaining.

Chemistry is one of the foremost sciences and the students are fortunate in having the facilities and the opportunity of taking such a course.



ASSEMBLY

Sh! Sh-h-h-h! Don't make a sound. This is the study hall and you mustn't disturb all the industrious students who are studying hard on their lessons.

That is they're supposed to be studying hard, but Mrs. Cline has a sneaking suspicion that sometimes their minds wander from chemical terms, history dates, and Latin phrases to wool gathering and day-dreaming.

Teacher's meeting in the assembly room after school on Tuesday, Jan. 9.

GRADE TEACHERS

Standing: Mr. Harry Inskeep, grade principal, Mrs. Vera Miller, Mrs. Geneva Walker, Mrs. Pauline Richardson, Mrs. Virginia Mintier, Mrs. Harriet Ball, Mr. Brian Smith.

The first six grades are a very important part of Sheridan School, and therefore the people who instruct the pupils in these grades are also important. Much of the credit for well informed and well disciplined high school students goes to the grade teachers, who in the most formative years of a child's life start him on the right path toward success and good citizenship.

'Tis education forms the common mind:
Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined.

through the crystal ball . . .

THE PAST

To look back on the days so gay
When the seniors were children at play,
I see them with scrubbed, shining faces,
Entering the first grade to take their places,
Among the scholars at Sheridan School.

Through the first six years the teacher managed to fix
In their minds some readin', writin', and 'rithmetic.
So creepingly, the years stole by
And proudly the class entered junior high
Well into the journey through Sheridan School.

As green little freshies, they were initiated
Into the realms of high school, where they anticipated
That someday mighty seniors they would be.
But first came the Latin, math, and history,
That all Sophs and Juniors must pass
To become members of this exclusive class
That reigns at Sheridan School.

The years sped on, and now I see
A class of mighty Seniors they be
Full of knowledge and education,
Solemnly awaiting the day of graduation
From Sheridan School.

SYLLABUS STAFF

Although very few people realize the work involved in publishing a yearbook the members of the staff believe the experience gained is worth the effort. To give you an idea of how this book was put together, let us look back over the year to the activities of various members of the staff.

First of all, early last fall the advertising committee had their workout. Not only did they canvass the businessmen of Sheridan, but as you will notice from the ad section, they also covered many surrounding towns.

After the pictures had been taken, they were mounted by the editor and sent to the engraving company. During this time the snapshot committee had been collecting the snapshots which they now mounted.

Around December the sales committee began taking orders for the annual, continuing to do so for several weeks.

For sometime the art committee had been working on the unique drawings appearing in this book.

In January, it was time to begin to write the copy which must accompany the pictures and tell the story of the activities at school during the '50-'51 year. The joke editors handed in their humorous quips which they had been collecting over the year and the sports editors provided the data on the athletic activities and achievements which have taken place this year. The typists took over then by typing and retyping all the material. The last material to be turned in was the calendar, which had been kept by a committee who had been busy recording the momentous events which occur to a busy Senior class.

The main responsibility of organizing the Syllabus fell to the editors and the business manager. The business manager had to see that money was collected, bills were paid, and that they kept within the budget which was set up at the beginning of the year, allowing a certain amount for engraving, printing, binding, covers, and other expenses. A constant threat to the editors' peace of mind has been the meeting of deadlines. Besides rushing to get their work completed, committees had to be spurred on so as to meet a deadline with the engraving, printing, and binding companies.

Much time, effort, and forethought by the annual staff has been put into this book of which we hope you are all proud.

"Grandad Steps Out"

The audience howled when the Seniors presented "Grandad Steps Out." Grandad, Carl Arthur, hadn't been out of the house for two years until Jim Mahoney from Arizoney, Wiley Sanders, turned up. Grandad's disappearance threw the Morton household into a state of confusion. Grandad's daughter, Laura, Phyllis Vair, the stupid maid, Tilly, Betty Dillinger, and Kip and Betty, Jack Gary and Doris Stephenson, suspect that Grandad has been kidnaped and the detective, Philip Cline, is called in. Miss Abby, Marilyn Merrill, the nosey old maid across the street, Jack Norwood, Jack Godby, and his triplet sisters, Ludie, Judy, and Trudie, Ruth Pickett, Wilma Haughey, and June Graham, and Mrs. Jobe Feeney, Barbara Pickett, a bossy housewife, round out the cast of this hilarious comedy. Juanita Wade was student director and Miss Elsie Padgett was director.

"The Campbells Are Coming"

Junior

Seated: Deloris Grinstead, Phyllis Hoover, Ruth Pickett, Miss Padgett, Norma Baird, Mabeth Beard.

Standing: Jack Gary, Wiley Sanders, Barbara Pickett, Carl Arthur.

"The Campbells Are Coming"

Ma Brannigan, Phyllis Hoover, and Dick and Betty Brannigan, Jack Gary and Ruth Pickett, were delighted when they found out that Kaye Brannigan, Deloris Grinstead, was coming home, but their spirits were dampened when Kaye informed them that Mrs. Augusta Campbell, Barbara Pickett, and her son and Kaye's fiance, Kingston, Bob Adair, were coming to visit. Jeffrey Scudder, Martin Little, Kaye's child-hood sweetheart, and his uncle, Cyrus Scudder, Wiley Sanders, are not happy about the aristocratic Campbell's visit. Catalpa Tapp, Norma Baird, the hillbilly servant, and Bildad Tapp, Carl Arthur, her father, make the startling announcement that Mrs. Campbell is Bildad's long lost sister. Then things really begin to happen! It was one of the funniest plays ever given in Sheridan and a real success. Mabeth Beard was student director and Miss Elsie Padgett was director.

DRIVER'S TRAINING

Driver's training was first offered in Sheridan High School two years ago and since then has become one of the most popular subjects.

Driving courtesy, safety rules, and highway laws are mastered besides the art of driving.

After a few days of class instruction, the classes are given a chance to practice some of the fundamental movements in the training car. A trip to the Sheridan Motor Company is an essential for each new class.

After the first few weeks the students become more adept in handling an automobile and Mr. Stout, the patient and forbearing instructor, has hopes that they will become courteous, considerate, and skillful drivers.

Football

The Sheridan Blackhawks ended the 1950 season with a record of four wins and five losses. The Hawks started slowly, losing the first three games, but came back to win the next three games.

One of the most exciting games of the season was the Noblesville game, in which the Hawks almost ended Noblesville's eight game winning streak; however, the Hawks could not hold their first half prowess, and went down fighting.

Another important game was the Kirklin-Sheridan classic, which for the first time this year was played for the "Water Bucket." Kirklin originated the trophy, and therefore, they gave it up only after a struggle.

The Blackhawks' 1950-51 schedule:

Sheridan	12	Wabash 33
Sheridan	6	Delphi 19
Sheridan	8	Jackson Central 13
Sheridan	6	Crawfordsville 0
Sheridan	12	Kirklin 6
Sheridan	8	Westfield 0
Sheridan	6	Crispus Attucks 32
Sheridan	14	Noblesville 20
Sheridan	12	Tipton 6

The old water bucket lies quiet and still,
But yet I recall the excitement and thrill
That gained us that fabulous bucket so dear.
Proud Kirklin did challenge without any fear,
Came out on the field as the crowds did roar.
They looked mighty vicious and growled even more.
Then out came Stout's boys, a good looking crew.
Both teams were ready when the whistle blew.
Sheridan received and the game began.

Both teams blocked, tackled, and ran.
Each thought he must win, the other must lose;
Neither wanted the "day after blues."
The game was over;
The fighting was done.
The fans raised a cheer.
And Sheridan walked off with the bucket so dear.
One game was over, the bucket was won.
But the long battle for it, had only begun.

Second Row: Meredith Went, Jerry Ottinger, Bob Rawlings, Max Gossard, Larry McClure, Mr. Hobbs, Coach.

The basketball team ended the season with 23 wins, 3 losses, an enviable record. Under the capable guidance of Coach Larry Hobbs, they started off with a bang and stayed in there till the last whistle in the last game.

One of the most exciting games was the Crispus Attucks game, the second of the season. The Blackhawks played a wonderful game although they came up short on the scoreboard.

They went on to win the New Year's Tourney, the County and the Sectional. They also won the Hoosier Conference.

Yell Leaders

The peppy and enthusiastic yell leaders, along with the displayed school spirit by the yelling section, are an incentive to the team to play the game in a true sportsmanship manner whether the last blow of the whistle brings victory or defeat. The yell leaders have done a wonderful job this year in helping to promote good school spirit and a good yelling section. Lora Pittigrew, Don Alexander, Mabeth Beard, and Joe Landis.

Where's the ball???

I see a long journey

I can see into the future, and recall the past, and in the future I see, for the seniors, a long and pleasant journey. I recall the past that made the journey possible.

When the Class of '51 became juniors, the journey looked far, far away, both in miles and money. Class dues for two years had not added much to their treasury's prestige. In fact there was almost nothing in the treasury, but in the minds of those juniors was that wonderful trip. They began to work.

On the night of the first football game that year, the popcorn didn't taste quite right and the soft drinks weren't cold enough, but that was only the first time. By the next football game, the workers were more experienced and everything went like clockwork. Selling popcorn and pouring cokes became routine. Occasionally some excitement enlivened the routine in the form of popcorn boxes coming open and showering the fans as the box went spiraling into the air. The workers received dirty looks when they spilled a drop or two of coke on someone as it went up to the customer by the "hand to hand elevator." The efforts of the ball game workers added to the amount in the treasury.

The class play added to the treasury, too, and it was such a thrill to think of producing a stage hit! The excitement of properties, make-up, and an ahdience of friends and relatives ont front was nice besides the thought of adding to the treasury.

The junior year ended all to soon, for there still wasn't enough money. Money, money, money! How thankful were those prospective seniors for having another year to complete their trip fund.

It wasn't popping corn or selling soft drinks in the senior year. Oh, no! They had just learned the ropes of those sales jobs so it was time to change.

After the terrible coffee and cold hot dogs at the first game, it's a wonder they made any profit at all. No wonder the coffee was awful. The girls didn't have the coffee maker put together right! By the next game the candy, ice cream, hot dogs, and even the coffee was all right.

The basketball season brought more fun and hard work for the concessioners; their self disgust when they couldn't catch the money that the customer threw down, and the embarrassment when the paper came off the ice cream bar as it flew up to the fans.

The seniors had the candy sales at noon, too. Those little grade school students can't realize how many miles of the trip they paid for by buying candy every noon.

The sales of the '51 Syllabus, the frst editing effort of the seniors, and another class play added more to the treasury.

Now the year is almost over, high school days for the Class of '51 are just a memory. They can sit back in the comfortable bus seats and sing as they head for Washington, D.C. and New York.

"We've made the money,
And now we'll take the time
To go sample the Atlantic seashore clime.
We'll spend all the money,
We'll have a wonderful time,
'Cause we earned the money,
And so we'll take the time."

THE FUTURE

Twelve short years and here they are,

Hitching their wagons to a star.

Through the open door of Sheridan
School they'll pass,

A diploma tightly clutched by each lad and lass.

As many Senior classes of yesteryore,

They will also scatter from shore to shore.

To the South, North, East, and West,

Each to his duty as he sees best.

Some will seek learning and become fine teachers,

Others will serve as lawyers, dentists,
or preachers

Others to the service of their country will go,

With loyalty and bravery to meet the foe.

Out into the world their fortunes to seek,

Down the road of life they'll make their trek,

Onward, until their youth's gone by,

Never losing their memories of Sheridan High.

JUNIOR CLASS

The Juniors got into full swing this year when they suddenly found themselves soft drink and pop corn concessioners. They truly were "jaunty juniors," for class members were outstanding in athletics, music and scholastic contests, and in 4-H work. Their class play, given in March, was a big success.

The "silly sophomores" does not apply to our Sophomores whose sophistication and sensible thinking prove that they are quite the opposite. Many of the class have been very active in extra-curricular activities.

CLASS HISTORY

As timid little "Freshies," they shied away from the big, bad Seniors for the first few days of school; but alas, it was to no avail, for they were fated to eat green persimmons and red peppers, to have their faces smeared with lipstick, and to withstand the trials and tribulations that befall this class at initiation time.

Their Sophomore year passed rather uneventfully. They had a skating party at Rollerland as their class party. That year, Miss Padgett and Mr. Hobson were appointed as sponsors, remaining with the class until their graduation.

During their Junior year, some of the members of the class were initiated into the Honor Society. The class presented a hillbilly play that was a huge success and began work selling popcorn, and soft drinks at ball games to earn money for that much awaited Senior trip the next year. A Jr.-Sr. Banquet was given in honor of the Seniors.

The Senior year fairly flew by, probably because everyone was so busy. The first semester another class play was given and several members of the class began work on the Syllabus staff. There were many decisions and selections to be made such as selecting caps and gowns, class colors, invitations, and the biggest and nicest problem of all was deciding about the Senior Trip. It was finally decided that they would go to Washington and New York, leaving on April 8, 1951. They chose as their class colors blue and white; "Give the best to the world and the best will come back to you" as the motto; and the American Beauty rose as the class flower.

AWAY

I can not say, and I will not say
That he is dead.--He is just away!
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.

MR. LARRY HOBBS—Principal

When the Seniors entered high school as freshmen in 1947, a new principal was at the helm!

During the following years, Mr. Hobbs has always been available to give advice and guidance. He has done much to help every student of Sheridan High School because of his deep and sincere interest and his understanding of the problems of young people.

Through his morning assembly talks he gives bits of wisdom and counsel for character building which are invaluable to every student.

Those people who know him may well hold him as their ideal of good citizenship because of his quiet but firm manner, his fairness to all, and his friendly and encouraging smile.

In the years following graduation, his wise thinking and able planning will be reflected in each student's life and in the kind of citizen he becomes.

As a fitting tribute, the class of 1951 has built this Syllabus around their beloved principal to whom they feel a deep gratitude.

The Editor's Note

To the entire staff and especially to the assistant editor and the business manager for their untiring efforts, to Mrs. Elma Griffith for her valuable advice and suggestions, to Mrs. Doris Griffith for her art supervision, to Mr. Hobbs and the faculty for their co-operation, and to all others who have in any way contributed to the 1951 Syllabus, I give my most sincere "thanks."

Dear Ernie,

On this last day when all of the class is together, it seems a shame that you, who started with us on this four year journey, can not finish it with us. But of course you have your high school memories, too.

There are so many little things which are so dear to us; they really are the things which make school days live long after graduation.

We started high school with such enthusiasm and zest. Do you remember? Of course you can't forget the wide-eyed amazement and confusion of that first day. We were really living!!

Need I even mention that fateful day when the Seniors became aware of us? The consequences are still all too vivid in my memory.

The pajama tops—the baby bottles—the knee walk—the style show—the garlic, persimmons, and chili sauce—all that was initiation.

Biology and algebra were new and unexplored fields for all of us. Oh! The thrill of being referred to as "older" students.

It seemed funny that football and basketball are different when you're in high school; when you really belong. I remember too, the nervousness of us freshmen boys that first game. We might have been star players with all the anxiety we felt.

Our freshman year was the year of the big storm when the windows blew out, the gym leaked like a sieve, and panic ran high.

You weren't here the next year, but school started with a bang, and we felt more at home and at ease.

We had just digested our algebra and biology when we found ourselves in to our necks, in new subjects and new interests.

It was even fun to see another class receive the warm welcome that seniors gleefully give the first week of school.

Our sophomore year was full of fun and folly but it had its serious moments, too. The serious moments served their purposes for it matured and prepared us for the rigors of our next two years.

When you become a junior, you've passed the middle line. If you have survived the first two years, how can you fail the last two?? It isn't easy!!

Our junior year was great! The work began but so did the fun.

Can anyone explain the work that is behind the profits that junior classes proudly expound about? You have to experience it personally.

Our first theatrical adventure came that year with "The Campbells are Coming."

I'm sorry you couldn't make it for the performances but you surely heard the rave notices.

Oh! The props for that play—the pig, the fishing worms, the corn pone, the moon shine, and the actors.

We played the grand hosts—our junior year, when we gave a banquet in the seniors' honor. I don't think the gym has ever looked so pretty as it did that night. The food was delicious, the flowers were lovely and the entertainment was a smash hit.

But the senior year—that's all, brother, that's all. It's too bad, but the boys finally lost—we had a girl officer.

Turn about is fair play! We initiated the "green freshies." They had their share of persimmons, make-up, and funny clothes.

Then—Then we started on an unending strain of late nights and tiresome hours under a "Scrooge-like" employer—1951 Syllabus.

Again we tried our hands at drama with the production of "Grandad Steps Out." It too was a huge success.

I didn't write you about the trip, did I? It was a wonderful seven days but of course in this limited period of time we couldn't see it all. It only made us want to go back some day and spend more time there. The impressive government buildings, the sky-scrapers, the bright lights, and the famous names. I know we certainly must have looked like "hicks," but it was a lot of fun.

But when we got home, it seemed impossible that there were only three weeks of school left.

These were the big things that we remember but there were so many little things that we shall never forget. The new and old faces at the first of school—the first football game—the first day of actual classes—the cloudy days when the gym leaked and we all were restless—the sunny days, when we were attacked with spring fever—the first cold days—the chilly assemblies on Monday mornings—the muddy roads that caused unexpected vacations—and the stuffed students the day after Thanksgiving.

The first basketball game of the season—the big Christmas tree in the hall—the monthly convocations—the dreaded report cards—Mr. Hobb's instructive morning talks—the first meal from the new cafeteria—the boom from the band in its new room in the wing—the excited juniors and seniors in their grease paint—the annual photographers—the music contests—the scholastic contests—football and basketball banquets—the introduction of cross-country—the opening of the track season—the senior pictures, name cards, and invitations—the annuals—and now on this last day, the plans for graduation—they are all a part of my high school life.

Two women were talking about their husbands in that indulgent manner they are accustomed to use when on that subject.

"Henry is perfectly helpless without me," said one.

"John is that way, too," said the other. "I don't know what would become of him if I went away for a week."

"Isn't that a fact?" sighed the first. "Sometimes I think my husband is a child the way I have to look after him. Why, whenever he is sewing on buttons, mending his clothes, or even darning his socks, I have to thread the needle for him."'

"Some of your constituents are disagreeing with you," said the trusted political advisor.

"Well, keep tab on them," replied Senator Blank. "When enough disagree with me to constitute a reliable majority I'm going to turn around and agree with them."

"Gee, pop, there's a man at the circus who jumps on a horse's back, slips underneath, catches hold of its tail, and finishes up on the horse's neck."

Dad: "That's easy. I did all that the first time I ever rode a horse."

"Here, madam," he said, "we have a native of Australia."

"Good gracious," she replied, "and to think that my sister married one of them."

"Hello, Bill, I hear you have a new youngster at your house," said his employer.

The new father glanced around the office apprehensively. "For Heaven's sake, you can't hear him way up here, can you?"

"Purely by accident, I have made one of the greatest discoveries," said the scientist.

"May I ask what it is?"

"I found," said the scientist, "that by keeping a bottle of ink handy you can use a fountain pen just like any other pen—without all the trouble of filling it.'

Lady: "Have you ever been offered work?"

Tramp: "Only once, Madam. Aside from that I've met with nothing but kindness."

A good-for-nothing city idler had inherited a country grocery store. He was taking his rest alongside the counter in his favorite chair when a customer came in and asked for a dozen apples. "I can't wait on you today," said the ex-city man. "Come in some time when I'm standing up."

Visitor: "What was your mother's name before she was married?"

Man: "Sittin' over there on the bench."

"Yes."

"Yes."

"Show me how much you would cry."

"Die first."

"It's wonderful, Sandy," said one Scot to another, "that you've lost your stutter. How did you do it?"

"'Twas easy," his friend replied. "I put through a three-minute call to New York."

So he kissed her.
